MAKING HISTORY

The eyes of the world have centered on Rome, over the election of a Pope. With the populace breathless watching the thin curl of smoke arising above the Vatican, signifying nothing doing; this, with the spectacle of our countryman, Carnegie, dressed in kilts, standing at the window of his Skibo castle, giving his townies a shower bath of watered United States steel stock, is a picture no artist can paint! Two million and a half dollars worth sends the chills reverberating up and down our spinal column! Then we turn to our own shearing pen on Wall street, where the gas is being kicked out of the over-capitalized financial balloons. We have, indeed, had a busy week, still the best way to catch thirteen cons has not yet been solved, only partially. It seems now that music, commonly supposed to have charms to soothe the savage breast, don't go. This marching the boys in blue over hill and dale likewise is not appreciated by the boarders of our State institutions. Civilization is the thing, noting that two of the worst have been captured in small towns, and it is safe to say that the balance will meet the same fate at the hands of some comparatively unknown local Constable, who will be entitled to have his photograph in one of the yellow sheets of the press of the State. The above facts are only mentioned as a parody on our grist mill of excitement that has prevailed in our line. The trade keeps up clamoring for our goods exclusively, so, with a few modifications, here goes:
