SACRAMENTO (The Heart of California)

Sacramento, the capital of California, and the fifth largest city in the State, has a population of 85,000. It is situated in the heart of the Sacramento Valley, one of the richest agricultural regions in the world.

The city became the metropolis of Northern California through its favorable situation as the chief shipping point of the Sacramento Valley. It stands on the banks of the Sacramento River, is served by two steamship lines, two transcontinental railroads and three electric lines, and is the hub of a statewide system of modern highways.

Each year there passes through the city over these lines $125,000,000 worth of all classes of products. A large proportion of these are carried on the Sacramento River, which is fourth in tonnage in the United States. Factory products add another forty millions. Fruit shipments aggregate something over thirty millions. The annual revenue from the asparagus industry alone is over five millions.

Sacramento's industrial plants are valued at $20,000,000. The city's yearly payroll is $28,000,000. The main shops of the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific railroads, employing 4,000 persons, are located here.

The California Almond Growers' Association, handling 95 per cent of all the almonds produced in the United States, have recently erected here one of the largest almond plants in the world.

Across the Sacramento river, in West Sacramento, are some of the largest rice mills in the country, handling the larger proportion of the Valley's enormous crop.

The main plant of America's greatest co-operative milk producing concern is located here.

These healthy industries are reflected in the clearings of the city's fourteen banks—$28,417,588.52 in 1921, $24,500,000 in 1922. Assessed valuation of property is $85,886,527.

Sacramento has an area of 14 square miles, 2 steamship lines, 2 transcontinental railroads, 1 electric railroad, an auto stage service extending in every direction, 130 miles of paved streets, 50 churches, 19 school buildings, 20 hotels, and a municipally owned water supply with lowest rate of any city of its class.
